Orland Park's first Village President (Mayor), Senator John Humphrey, built his family home in 1881, the second house in what was to become the Village of Orland Park. It is of Italianate architecture and its front porch columns, although stylistically compatible, are not original.

When the house was first built, the front porch resembled the east and west porches. Except for the modernization to add electricity and plumbing, the home is essentially as it was when built.

Senator Humphrey was born in Wisbech, Norfolk, England in 1838. He came to the Orland area with his mother and stepfather. During the summer, he worked for his board and clothes and he attended country school in the winter.

In 1859, Humphrey joined the gold seekers travelling to California. After he took ill in California, he returned home after the start of the great Civil War. His mother, now a widow with small children, needed his help.

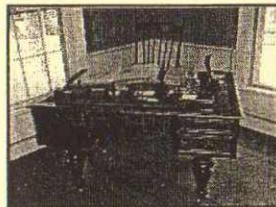

Throughout the war, Humphrey organized home guards and cared for his mother, stepsisters and brothers and for those whose husbands, fathers and brothers had gone to war.

Shortly after the end of the war, Humphrey married Amelia A. Patrick. The first Mrs. Humphrey died in March, 1898, leaving behind their three children, Wirt E. Humphrey, Clara B. Meyers and Maud E. Humphrey. John Humphrey later married Ida M. Stuart, with whom he had one child, John Stuart Humphrey.

Humphrey was first elected to the General Assembly of Illinois in 1870. He was re-elected in 1884 and was elected to the Illinois State Senate in 1886. He was re-elected until his last term closing in 1910.

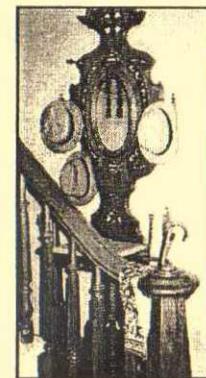

Senator Humphrey's Home Office

In the General Assembly, Senator Humphrey was a forceful debater and a careful and conscientious lawmaker. He was admitted to the practice of law by the Supreme Court of Illinois in 1874. He maintained a law office in Chicago until his death in 1914.

One of Humphrey's significant accomplishments as an attorney involved the City of Chicago. Senator John Humphrey was instrumental in preventing Chicago from expanding beyond its current borders.

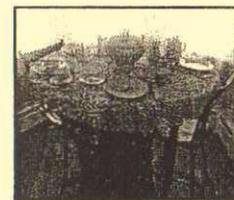

In Orland Park, Humphrey's honesty and reputation for square dealing in all transactions earned him the name, "Honest John."

Humphrey was elected Supervisor of Orland Township in 1867 and was re-elected each year up until the time of his death. He was treasurer of the township from 1876. John Humphrey is credited with having the Village of Orland Park incorporated as a municipality in the State of Illinois. He served as the village's first president (mayor) until his death in 1914.

During a trip to England in 1914, Humphrey became ill. He returned to the Chicago area where he died. John Humphrey knew every man, woman and child for miles around and the entire town mourned his death. Schools and businesses closed for the day as the people of Orland Park solemnly walked past Humphrey's bier to pay their final respects.

Extended dining room table

John Stuart Humphrey, Senator Humphrey's last surviving child, died in April, 1987. The younger Humphrey willed the family home, furnishings and property to the Orland Historical Society. Since that time, the Society has been working to restore the Humphrey House to the time of the Senator's life in Orland Park.

In addition to the Humphrey Home, Orland Park's first mayor is remembered with the John Humphrey Sports Complex and John Humphrey Drive.
